

These regulations represent a most onerous burden to small businesses. My relationship with clients and patients serve as the basis for my use of fax communication. Moreover, these regulations severely limit the rights of individuals to communicate, a possible violation of first amendment rights. It is amazing that the same FCC that would sell out United States airwaves to media conglomerates without a care will now interfere with established relationships in business, organizations of common interest, and personal communication. Bug off.